

JANE GOODALL

Jane Goodall is a world-renowned primatologist, anthropologist, and environmentalist who is widely recognized for her groundbreaking work with chimpanzees.

She began studying chimpanzees in Tanzania in 1960 and discovered that they have complex social structures and personalities similar to humans. Her research revolutionized our understanding of primate behavior.